

Coming back from the half break the Hornets continued to move the ball downfield scoring on a couple of occasions against a worn Steer defense that didn't let them move without resistance. A tired Steer offense would find a spark late in the fourth quarter with a long Kick Return by Brody Pitcock, but the spark would come too late, and the Steers fell to the Hornets.

The Steers are now 7-2 in the season and 2-1 in district play. The Steers will now face the Eden Bulldogs in Robert Lee and try to end the regular season with a win. Steer fans come to show your support and cheers on the Steers in their last home game of the regular season.

They are what Tocqueville recommended when his book was published in 1835. We must strengthen our local institutions. Social media is a farce, a façade, and a toxic waste of time. National and state politics are a circus. Devoting our emotions to any of those things will leave us disappointed, unhappy, and probably fighting with our neighbor.

We must look inward and more parochial. We must work with our neighbor and view local government, churches, and civic/community organizations with a renewed vigor and an awareness of their importance to a society's happiness. If we do that, we will be shocked how much we improve our community, our own mental well-being, and the world at large.

On This Day in Texas History

October 27, 1877
On this day in 1877 the Elissa, an iron-hulled, three-masted barque built at the shipyard of Alexander Hall and Company of Aberdeen, Scotland, was launched. After a long and varied career the vessel was purchased in 1974 by the Galveston Historical Foundation as a restoration project to complement the Strand Historic District, the Victorian market center of the city.
