...Pooling together

Once funds are in hand, construction on the new tabernacle can begin. Van Rite, a member of Wise EC, says it might be a year before that happens, but there are plans to use as much of the old building as possible. All the original timber posts were saved, and the rusty old tin roof might be placed underneath the new roof—and visible from below. They were even able to salvage an end piece from a pew that resided under the tabernacle, so new pews will be modeled on the old ones.

Until the June fundraiser, it wasn't clear if Poolville residents would be able to raise enough money for the new structure, but the outpouring of support from the community and surrounding towns proved otherwise.
