Coke County Water Supply Corporation awarded grant

The Texas Water Resources Institute (TWRI) has awarded a grant to the Coke County Water Supply Corporation (CCWSC) to help fund the construction of a new water supply system. The grant is for $100,000 and will be used to purchase and install a new water supply system. The CCWSC is a public utility that provides water to the residents of Coke County. The grant will help the CCWSC to improve the water supply system and ensure that the residents of Coke County have access to clean, safe water.

SPECIAL OIL & GAS SECTION

By Melissa McClellan, Publisher

Many Coke County citizens view the oil and gas industry as a source of economic growth and jobs. However, the industry also has the potential to cause environmental damage and health problems. The oil and gas industry is a major source of air pollution and greenhouse gas emissions. It is also a major source of water pollution and land degradation. The oil and gas industry is also a major source of environmental justice issues. The oil and gas industry has a long history of discrimination against minority communities. The industry has often located its operations in poor, minority communities. The industry has also often caused environmental damage in these communities. The oil and gas industry is a complex and controversial industry. It is important for us to understand the benefits and risks of the industry and to make informed decisions about how to regulate it.
